

Protect Your Family and Your Pets From Rabies

Rabies is a very real threat to domestic pets in our area. Rabies can be spread by mammals through bites, scratches, mucous membranes and open wounds. People, pets, livestock and wildlife are all at risk. You can help by avoiding wild animals, obeying your county regulations by walking pets on a leash or confining them at home, having your pets vaccinated, securing trash and not feeding pets outdoors. For dates and times of upcoming rabies clinics in your area, please contact your local humane organization or animal control.
