

An aerial photograph of a landscape dominated by dense green forests. A distinct transition zone is highlighted in the center-left by a yellow starburst graphic. This transition zone is characterized by a mix of green and brownish-yellow vegetation, indicating a change in land use or ecosystem. A winding road or path cuts through this transition area, leading towards a more developed or cleared land to the left. The surrounding forest is a rich green, with various shades indicating different types of vegetation or terrain. The overall image shows a clear contrast between the natural forest and the human-influenced transition zone.
